From the Class Teachers' Desk

“When tradition remembers, language awakens, and learning quietly takes root.”

Dear Parents,

Warm Greetings from DPS Electronic City!

The turn of the calendar into February invites reflection - a gentle pause to look back at the moments that shaped the opening chapters of the year and to carry their meaning forward. The months of January and February together form a thoughtful tapestry, where culture, citizenship, and curiosity intertwine to nurture young minds.

January unfolded with the warmth of Pongal, a celebration steeped in gratitude - for the earth that sustains, the labour that nourishes, and the communities that bind us together. Through this harvest festival, students experienced the beauty of giving thanks, discovering how tradition teaches reverence for nature and respect for shared effort.

The month also resonated with the solemn pride of Republic Day, a moment when the tricolour rose as a symbol of unity, resilience, and democratic spirit. As students engaged with the ideals enshrined in the Constitution, they were gently reminded that freedom is accompanied by responsibility, and citizenship begins with awareness and integrity.

February will bring with it a softer yet equally profound celebration - the KG Mathrubhasha Celebration. In classrooms filled with music, movement, and expression, our youngest learners will discover the joy of language as it lives closest to the heart. Through stories, rhymes, and playful interactions, children will embrace their mother tongue as a bridge between thought and feeling, identity and expression - laying the foundation for confident communication and joyful learning.

As these months gently pass into memory, they leave behind more than a record of events - they leave enduring impressions. The celebrations and observances of January and February together reaffirm our belief that education is a shared journey, one that honours tradition, strengthens values, and nurtures curiosity. Through such meaningful experiences, we continue to support our students in growing into confident, compassionate, and thoughtful learners.

Together, we move forward - honouring our roots while shaping confident learners.

Warm Regards,

Class Teacher

The Power of the Pause – In the Space Between

“Between stimulus and response, there is a space. In that space is our power to choose our response.” - Viktor E. Frankl

In a world that constantly urges us to hurry - finish the meal, complete the homework, move to the next task - we often forget one quiet yet powerful parenting tool: the pause.

Children live in the present moment. Their questions, stories, worries, and wonders don't follow our schedules. When we pause - before correcting, before reacting, before rushing - we give our children something rare and precious: our full attention.

A pause can turn a mistake into a conversation, rather than a scolding.

A pause can transform a meltdown into a moment of connection.

A pause teaches children that emotions are meant to be understood, not hurried away.

When parents pause, children learn patience without being taught the word. They learn emotional regulation by watching it modelled.

They feel safe enough to express themselves honestly, knowing they won't be met with instant judgment or dismissal.

As rightly said by John Marshall,

“To listen well is as powerful a means of communication and influence as to talk well.”

Try this at home:

- Pause before responding to your child's frustration - listen first.
- Take a moment during busy routines to acknowledge their effort.
- Pause at the end of the day to simply sit together, without instructions or expectations.

These small pauses may seem insignificant, but they quietly build trust, emotional strength, and self-worth. Over time, children begin to pause too- before reacting, before giving up, before doubting themselves.

In the long run, it is not the speed of parenting that shapes children, but the stillness within it.

Because sometimes, the most powerful lessons are taught not in words - but in moments of calm presence.

Health Tip

“Healthy habits today create a stronger tomorrow.”

February in Bengaluru brings mild temperatures and an early summer onset. This month is ideal for focusing on hydration, allergy prevention, and overall wellness. Encouraging simple daily habits can help students stay healthy and energised.

1. Stay Hydrated – Temperatures begin to rise in February. Students should drink water regularly to prevent dehydration.
2. Protect Against Seasonal Allergies – Pollen levels increase this month. Washing hands and face after outdoor play helps reduce irritation.
3. Eat Seasonal Fruits – Oranges, papayas, and bananas boost immunity and provide natural energy.
4. Be Sun Smart – UV levels increase. Wearing caps during outdoor activities offers protection from the heat.
5. Stay Active – Pleasant mornings are great for walking, playing, or light exercise for at least 30 minutes.
6. Maintain Good Hygiene – Warm weather increases sweat; daily bathing and clean clothes prevent infections.
7. Ensure Good Sleep – Students still need 8–10 hours of sleep for focus and well-being.
